Everyone hold your noses. We're in Garden City Kansas. Feed lots to the north. Feed lots to the west. Feed lots to the south. Feed lots to the east.

Yesterday started cold. We came over the last of the mountains through Monarch Pass:

Stopped to see Royal Gorge, home to the highest suspension bridge in the country. You can walk across it and/or take a train through it. Very impressive. Not a National Park, so take at least one credit card:

Had lunch in Canon City at Le Petit Chablis with Harry and Cooky, who drove down from Breckenridge. Sheila and I had the Salade Michelle. It has been a rugged mountain vacation:

Last email. I can hear the sighs of relief.
