We're on the road again. Set your email filters or suffer the consequences.

This is Bent's Old Fort.

This is a long story. If you already heard it, don't let me bore you, skip to the next paragraph. If you haven't heard it, it's boring anyway. We got this book on National Parks of the Southwest. We had been to a lot of them so we decided to go to the rest. This trip is all about picking up about 15 of them. Unfortunately there are a bunch of forts in that book and as little as we care about forts we'll hit them anyway.

Bent's Old Fort is near La Junta, CO, where we are staying in the Holiday Inn Express. We brought our own supper. We have been in La Junta before. The fort is as interesting as it looks. Walls. Rooms.

Two more tomorrow, I think.

PS - Must See in Eastern Colorado: 10 foot tall loaves of alfalfa.
